Fairs and Exhibitions in CEFTA Countries

Significance of fairs and exhibitions in the CEFTA-region

Fairs and exhibitions in modern economies are one of the most important instruments in order to establish networks of information about trade with all kind of commodities. They are the best platform to promote bilateral contacts in areas like trade, manufacturing and investments. They provide tremendous opportunities for the business communities by exchanging information so as to better stand the challenges of modern globalisation. Knowledge of the international Customs rules will serve to make better use of experiences made on fairs and exhibitions to the benefit of the business.

In late 2007, after a lengthy process of ratification procedures in the member states, the „Agreement on Amendment and Accession to the Central European Free Trade Agreement“ entered into force. Contracting parties are Albania, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia, Macedonia, Moldova, Montenegro, Serbia and the United Nations Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) on behalf of Kosovo. This Agreement, concluded in 2006 and therefore called „CEFTA 2006“, on one side is a follow up-Agreement of the preceding CEFTA-Agreement of 1992, established by the then founding states Poland, Hungary and then Czechoslovakia, on the other side it is a consolidation of a „spaghetti bowl“ of 32 bilateral Free Trade Agreements, concluded between 2002 and 2005 by the already mentioned contracting parties. These Agreements mostly contained all structural elements of the Agreement of 2006, except for some slight differences, which now were harmonised.

The CEFTA 2006-Agreement was from the beginning embedded into the targets of the EU-launched Stabilisation and Association Process for the region. The promotion of security, stability and economic prosperity was of highest priority for both the EU and the CEFTA-contracting parties, whereas for the CEFTA-states the prospect of an eventual EU-membership constitutes an additional incentive for engaged implementation of this policy. Therefore an existing Association Agreement with the EU was condition for an accession to the Agreement (fulfilled by all contracting parties, mostly on Interim base, except the UNMIK administered territory of Kosovo).

Subsequently the new CEFTA-Agreement was based on the principles of the World Trade Organisation (WTO), especially the most important GATT-Agreements. The formal membership in the WTO is not necessary (as it was condition for an accession to the 1992 Agreement), since three contracting parties (Bosnia and Herzegovina, Serbia and the UNMIK administered Kosovo) actually are no WTO members, but with successfully ongoing of the accession negotiations for Bosnia and Herzegovina and Serbia. For these three contracting parties the firm commitment to the GATT-rules and the procedures of the WTO constitutes a substantial part of the contractual obligations arising from the CEFTA membership.

The new Agreement covers an area of some 309.000 sq. km with a population of about 31 Million people with a yearly GDP of about 240 bill. $ (all figures as of 2007). The main objective of the new Agreement – besides the political stabilisation in the region – is the improvement of the economic development by establishing a Free Trade Zone between the contracting parties to the end of the year 2010 at the latest.

Most important elements of the Free Trade Zone are the mutual trade concessions by abolition of import and export duties and quantitative restrictions incl. charges having equivalent effect. The abolition of these tariff barriers were scheduled in general on the date of legal entry into force. For specific goods, benefiting of a certain protection because of their nature as being sensitive for the national economies of the contracting parties (mostly agricultural goods), dismantling schemes or reducing tariffs for a transition period including tariff quotas have been established, for highly sensitive products even the full retention of MFN-rates.

Besides the tariff regime, other criteria and circumstances of modern trade relations like technical barriers, protection of intellectual property, sanitary and phytosanitary measures incl. the mutual recognition of the related certificates etc. have been ruled out in the Agreement. All these instruments have to be governed according to the provisions of the related GATT Agreements.

The economic cornerstone of the Free Trade within the CEFTA-Zone are the mutual Customs preferences by total or partial (see above) abolition of Customs duties for border crossing goods as it also was determined in the preceding 32 bilateral Agreements between the contracting parties. In order to ensure, that the preferential treatment shall be granted only to goods really „produced“ in the respective partner state and to avoid any unjust practices or fraudulent detours, rules of origin have been defined for all goods subject to foreign trade exchanges under preferential regime. The definition of the concept of „originating products“ in the CEFTA-Agreement follows the model used by the EU in its worldwide trade relations. The major criteria to be respected in order to obtain the preferential origin for goods are:

- the wholly obtainment of products without any use of non originating materials,
- the manufacturing of a new commodity, which now can be classified in a 4-digit heading of the „Harmonised System Nomenclature“ other than that of the used non originating materials,
- a limited percentage for the use of these materials,
- a prescribed technological manufacturing process.

These criteria, put up in a „List of working and processing“ as Annex to the Origin Protocol of the CEFTA-Agreement, frequently are combined, which then requires very careful calculation works by the manufacturer including the planning of investments.

In case these criteria can not be matched, what normally does not lead to a preferential origin, the application of the „accumulation rules“ can help. This instrument, considered as being the core of the rules of origin, allows the use of non-originating materials from any CEFTA partner state, the remaining EFTA-states, Turkey and the EU. The advantage of the accumulation rule is, that the origin nevertheless will be conferred, although the criteria of the „List“ may not be fulfilled, provided the working/processing goes beyond specific simple operations of a very low input level, listed in an Article of the Origin Protocol. This accumulation option, even though in practice somehow difficult to manage, opens big opportunities for specialised small and medium sized enterprises (SMEs) in the whole accumulation zone, working with high expertise in a certain, indispensable stage of the complete manufacturing process. Such technical capacity even can reduce the quota of limited percentage of used materials for the finished goods in case of manufacturing semi-finished or intermediate products according to the origin criteria.

This „Pan-European accumulation model“ developed by the EU for all its Free Trade Agreements, is also applied in the Free Trade Agreements of the CEFTA member states with the EU in the frame of the Stabilisation and Association Pact. This means a substantial facilitation for the border crossing exchange of goods not only within the CEFTA region, but also with the EU, the remaining EFTA-states and Turkey. These cross-European markets indeed invite the business community for contacts, mutual presentations, networks and exchange of information. Fairs and expositions to this end are a very appropriate platform.
